

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a system providing one or more users with a private personal network formed from contacts with one or more entities known directly or indirectly to the user and allows a user to apply a selective interaction with the entities for a predetermined activity by controlling the entities to be included according to their degree of separation from the user.